Golden Hour

Bio of Ihiyo Chadwick

Ihiyo Chadwick is a student and interdisciplinary artist who loves writing songs, teaching himself guitar, online video games and free imaginary play. Ihiyo has a strong sense of urgency when it comes to the responsibility that adults have to solve the global environmental problems they have created. He also enjoys visiting and checking in on the neighbors that live nearby, many of whom are elderly.

Summary of Artwork

This week, Ihiyo participated in a citizen science sea level rise monitoring project along with his mom, Tara Chadwick, in collaboration with Golden Repair, a global day of creative action on climate organized by Adam Kuby and Micro Galleries. This is photo he took of his mom dancing in the puddle before they collected samples of the flood water that often covers coastal streets in South Florida during king tides. It is part of a series of photo and video documentation of the day titled "Golden Hour."

The 'Together For Our Planet' Initiative (2021)

A collaboration between Occhi Arts and Entertainment and Phoenix FTA Limited, a UK-based sustainability strategy consultancy. Inspired by the UK Creative Earth Competition, Occhi Arts and Entertainment and Phoenix FTA Limited invited young artists from around the world to creatively engage with key topics of concern at the COP26 Climate Summit in Glasgow. The initiative provided young artists with a renewed opportunity to visually express their views to world leaders and community stakeholders by producing 2D artwork (drawing, painting, printmaking, collage, and photography)
